Atramenti - World of Ink

"The Brigand Bales fears not these encroachers, so why should we. Their claims that only those bound by daemon-writ is their focus should not be heeded. Where one 'Pact Burner' is found more will follow. The Coin-Lords care not who enters our fields. I do."
- A declaration from the Duke of Denbur.

"My reign was accented by the War of the Bookkeepers. A conflict that tore at the threads of the Cineri itself. I know in time you will find our lands with freshly sewn power balances amongst the Dukes, emboldened raids from the south, talks of unification to our west, an ever narrowing forest line to our east, and the centre of our faith bring a new concern of discordance. I pray to Amar he will grant me time to steward you into a fine enough Emperor to weather these storms."
- A royal letter from Emperor Maxil IV three weeks before his passing.

"If I may speak plainly my son, Taexil III is nine. The councils steady growth of power during the reign of Maxil IV will undoubtedly reach a zenith. This height will only be matched by their incessant squabbling. We will not survive by ink, history, and words, but by blood, steel, and iron."
- A letter bearing the mark of Hoff addressed to Suudpost.
